Monochromatic adventures of indeterminate, curved shapes

Lines broken and unbroken, like the interweaving of harmonic currents

Graphismes, too

A private script or symbols of an impenetrable or illegible cipher

At times, textual allusions that cover empty spaces with their murmur

At times, bright portals – interminable stalemates

Intimations of abstract concepts

Internment and freedom both

And playful motifs trapped within a mesh

In the end, a process of abstraction, despite the accumulation of paint and shapes

Rhythm, permutation, mutation

Also

Actions of an inner power

Like the quest for the intimate sound that lies within the forms of matter

Or

Attempts to delineate self-awareness

Thalea Stefanidou

Note, February 15, 2013, Thessaloniki